Photowalk tips & tricks

I have written an article with a few tips and suggestions on street photography (also applies to photography in general), that you might find an interesting read. I have no intention of telling anyone how and what to photograph, but if you feel that most of your images look like snapshots (not that there is anything wrong with snapshots) and would like to find ways to make your photographs invoke feelings rather than simply document what you see, this might be an article worth reading.

With respect to our Worldwide Photowalk...

When you walk the streets with your camera be mindful of your surroundings. It is easy to be caught up by the moment and forget you walk in traffic of people, bicycles, and motorized vehicles. Perhaps you may need to cross a busy street. Or feel the urge to stop in a busy sidewalk. Be aware of your own safety as well as those around you.

Stay safe, dress appropriately for the weather and stay hydrated, I hope you brought an extra memory card and battery for your camera.

Finally, try to keep up with the group. We will end the walk at a café for a cup of coffee, something else to drink, and/or a snack, where we can look through the photographs we've made. Maybe you have a final question or thoughts you would like to share. At any rate it's nice to be able to say goodbye to each other. So stay with your group and be mindful that YOUR desire to get a photograph just right, does not delay everyone else waiting for you.
